Kambel Smith

Philadelphia based artist Kambel Smith (b. 1986) builds large-scale, intricate sculptures of historical buildings out of cardboard collected from trash. With no formal training in art or architecture, Kambel uses a natural ability to gauge perspective and scale without measuring tools. Kambel considers himself "An Autisarian", or a person born with super-human abilities due to the condition called autism. His family created a non-profit organization dedicated to changing the face of autism by changing the attitude of those challenged with it. The Autisarian symbol serves as a beacon of light for the growing wave of autistic super-humans.
